His name was Fleming, and he was a poor Scottish farmer. One day, while trying to make a living, he heard a cry for help coming from a nearby swamp. He dropped his tools and ran to the swamp. There, with mud to his waist, was a terrified boy, screaming and struggling to free himself. Farmer Fleming saved the boy from what could have been a slow and terrifying death.

The next day, a fancy carriage pulled up to the Scotsman's sparse surroundings. An elegantly dressed nobleman stepped out and introduced himself as the father of the boy that Farmer Fleming had saved.

"I want to repay you," said the nobleman. "You saved my son's life."

"No, I can't accept payment for what I did," the Scottish farmer replied, waving off the offer.

At that moment, the farmer's own son came to the door of the house. "Is that your son?" the nobleman asked. "Yes," the farmer replied. "I'll make you a deal. Let me take him and give him a good education. If the boy is anything like his father, he'll grow up to be a man you can be proud of."

Farmer Fleming looked at his son fondly and he agreed. In time, Farmer Fleming's son graduated from St. Mary's Hospital Medical School in London. He later went on to become known throughout the world as the noted Sir Alexander Fleming, the discoverer of Penicillin.

Years afterward, the nobleman's son was stricken with an infection of the lungs. A disease known as pneumonia. What saved him? Penicillin.

Will Keith Kellogg, founder of the cereal company, found his first job as a stock-boy, and became a travelling broom salesman in his late teens. He then worked as a clerk at a hospital, assisting his brother in the research for a vegetarian diet for patients.

Will Kellogg stumbled on a major break-through when he accidentally left a pot of 5 boiled wheat to stand and become tempered. When it was put through the usual rolling patients.
