It took a lot of ants to fill Chirp's empty stomach, so I started to dig for worms. Chirp followed me around excitedly and chirped with delight whenever I (16) uncovered one. I felt like a slave, getting up early in the morning and going to work for her. Still I (17) worked hard, looking for more. Soon the supply of worms in our garden started to (18) decrease in number and it took longer and longer to find one.

Then, I decided to introduce Chirp to her own species. I turned on the sprinkler and before long, we were joined by many different birds which fluttered about (19) frenziedly, chirping and splashing in the water. I pushed Chirp to (20) partake in the excitement at the pool party, but she kept running back to me. I was worried that my Chirp would not be accepted by her kind.

In collaboration with SG50 Committee

LET'S CELEBRATE AT NPARKS

As Singapore celebrates her 50th birthday in 2015, there are many exciting activities lined up for you! Develop a deeper appreciation for our green spaces and natural heritage and join us in making Singapore our City in a Garden.

Look out for special activities that are jointly organised together with our food, retail and recreational outlets in celebration of this occasion!

SG50 MASS TREE PLANTING

Every Sunday from September 2015 to November 2015

Join us to make Singapore a better place to live in for all!

You will have the opportunity to take part in planting 5,000 trees at 50 locations island wide. Proceeds of this mass tree planting will go towards the Garden City Fund, which funds NParks' outreach and education programmes, as well as conservation projects to continue Singapore's greening journey.

Interested individuals and organisations may contact garden\_city\_fund@nparks.gov.sg.

An hour later, Larry's van left the highway. Nancy and Ned followed the van cautious, not wanting to alert him. Larry pulled up in front of Totally Toys, got out and rushed into the shop.

(40)

(41)

Ned kroosed slowly past the store. A sign that read 'Closed' hang on the front door.

(42)

"Closed in the middle of the morning?" Ned kwestshened.

(43)

(44)

"My thoughts iksacly. I have a feeling Larry flipped that sign about to ensure no customers dropped in. I wonder whether the store has a back entrance," replied Nancy.

(45)

Ned stepped up his brakes and the car halted. "You're not going in there. Remember you said

Fill in each blank with a suitable word.

It was a dark night in Meulaboh, Aceh, Sumatra. The tsunami that (51) _____ in the Indian Ocean had swept across several countries. The town of Meulaboh was badly hit.

My colleagues and I were there as (52) _____ of a Singapore Armed Forces Relief Operation. For days, some of us had been busy unloading food, water, medicine and other supplies from the ships before (53) _____ them to Meulaboh. Others were involved in (54) _____ medical aid and setting up landing sites so that more supplies could (55) _____ the people. Along the way, I came across a man and a young boy walking towards me. They were heading the (58) _____ direction. The man looked haggard and he held a fishing rod. I inquired after him and asked where he was going. Replying that he was alright, he indicated that he was off to fish. I was being (59) _____ than just friendly. It was my duty to check who was entering and leaving the area. There was (60) _____ more to say but something about the man made me go on - perhaps it was his tired face or the sad (61) _____ in his eyes.

"Why are you fishing?" I asked him politely. "Is there enough (62) _____ for you and your family?"

He replied that he did. He then (63) _____ us for the assistance we had rendered. However his tone and appearance indicated that something other than hunger was making him sad.

"Have you lost something in this disaster?" I ventured.

He answered simply, "I am a judge and I have lost everything. Only my wife, my son and I (64) _____ the disaster. My house is completely destroyed."

As he said this, I looked at him again, trying to (65) _____ how much the man had gone through. I had never experienced such loss. It was then that I promised to treasure whatever I had.

Section I: Comprehension (Open-ended) (20 marks)

Read this passage and answer questions 71 to 80 in complete sentences.

Fay was instantly alert. She was very sensitive to everything as a new mother. She leapt to her feet, peered out through the grass at the mouth of the cave and gasped.
Outside the cave, the evening sun cast the long shadow of a wolf.
Fay knew that once the wolf had picked up their scent, she would not be satisfied with a good meal. No matter how many snakes she hurled out of the cave, it would not be enough to persuade the wolf to leave. She would wait by the entrance to the cave, eat the snakes and then with her energy restored, charge into the cave and tuck into the jackals. She would not leave until all the jackals were dead.	5
The only way Fay's two-week-old pups could make it through this would be to stay where they were, out of sight, and not make a sound, but that was wishful thinking. The grey wolf clearly had sharp eyes, sharp ears and a sharp sense of smell. Fay knew the wolf had already discovered the cave with its jackal den inside. The wolf's tail was up, straight as a stick, and her mouth had widened slightly revealing a set of sharp white fangs.	10
Fay was so tense she could hardly breathe. Right now, she could not think of a way out of this situation. The wolf was inching closer to the cave. At that critical moment, she made a mistake. She was worried that the pups might cry out or try to move that she held them tightly to her body. She just wanted them to be quiet. When the male-pup tried to pull away, Fay held him down firmly as if to say, "I need you to be quiet!" But the pup was uncomfortable. He became quite violent and bit her. As though stung by a red ant, Fay flinched instinctively and let go of him. The pup pulled away and squealed with relief. The female-pup followed him and the two squealed in unison. They were so small, so young and had no concept of danger.	15
The grey wolf stopped. She gave a low growl, and scoured the cave with her bright green eyes. From the wolf's raised hair and the tension in the bend of her legs, Fay knew that the wolf had found them and was preparing to attack.	20
Without thinking, she grabbed the female-pup by the scruff of her neck and bounded out of the cave. It wasn't that Fay was a coward in the face of danger or that she was selfishly putting her own life before that of her pups. If she felt that she had even a twenty percent chance of beating the wolf, she would not have hesitated for one moment to give that grey wolf the fight of her life. It would be suicidal. She was only two-thirds the size of a wolf; her teeth were not as sharp and she was not as strong. She knew she had no chance. If she died, what hope was there for her pups? Either the wolf would eat them or they would die of hunger.	25
Her strategy was to take one pup. There was less chance of losing them both at once if she split them up. If the wolf did not chase after her, she would at least have the female-pup. On the other hand, if the wolf did come after her, she would run and run, twisting and turning in every direction till the grey wolf lost her bearings. She would then sacrifice the female-pup and seize the opportunity to return to the cave. This was her area where she had lived all her life. She knew it so well that she could return to the cave, to the male-pup even when blindfolded. Lose one, save the other - what an awful choice for a mother to make.	30
