Jason's inconsiderate playful nature often gets him into trouble with his friends.

One day, Jason started taunting David with hurtful names, igniting a heated argument between the two. Fueled by anger, David pulled at Jason's shirt to throw a punch at him.

While trying to dodge the punch, Jason fell backwards. He struggled to regain his footing, slipping several times, much to David's amusement. A teacher near the scene quickly intervened and was surprised that both boys were unscathed in the event.

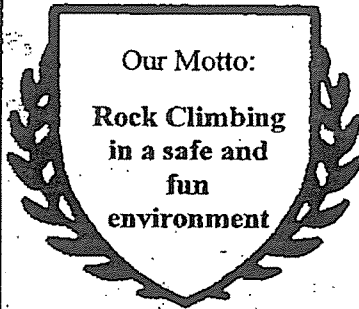

When the boys were composed, the teacher mediated between them and made Jason recognise that David did not appreciate the name-calling. Jason promised not to mock his friends anymore.

Please note that the passage for Comprehension questions 71 to 80 in Booklet B is on page 10. You may now go on to Booklet B.

Refer to the passage below when you answer questions 71 to 80 in Booklet B.

During my childhood, music frequently echoed through my bedroom from our neighbour next door. The sound of piano keys pinging away as students practised was my constant companion while I played with my toys. The only break came when my father turned up the television to its maximum volume while watching football to drown out the piano sound.	5
Our neighbour, Mrs Dee, a piano teacher who worked from home, was often referred to as "Mrs Demon" by the neighbourhood kids. Her voice carried an aura of fear, sending shivers down the spines of those nearby. I often heard her reprimanding her students for not practising enough or the parents for sending their children to lessons late.	10
At the age of five, I was determined to learn how to play the piano. I was certain that I had already learned it through hours of listening to other students stumbling through their songs. I wanted to show Mrs Dee how gifted I was.
During lessons, Mrs Dee would sit upright, tapping the beat with one finger as I played the piano. There was no doubt that she was listening intently for the slightest mistake.	15
My weekly lessons with Mrs Dee proceeded relatively smoothly. I learned one song from the piano book and then another effortlessly.
Under Mrs Dee's strict rules, her students were allowed to work on only one song at a time. However, I was too impatient for Mrs Dee's method. I started looking ahead in the piano book, not just a few pages but deep into the more advanced songs. During one lesson, I proudly showcased one of them to Mrs Dee, but she exploded with disapproval, "Clara! You're not ready for it! That's not how you learn piano!"	20
In my defense, I retorted, "But why? I am ready. I just played it."	25
"That's not how it's done. You need to follow a proper learning progression," Mrs Dee snapped, her eyes narrowing.
Since then, piano lessons were no longer enjoyable. I resented going for lessons and could not understand why Mrs Dee had stubbornly refused to see the value of me taking initiative in my learning.	30
One evening, over dinner, I finally poured out all my frustrations to my parents. While other parents might have scolded their child for being disrespectful to an elder, my father chuckled and said, "Well, it sounds like a lively debate going on."
My mother chimed in, "It's good to question authority sometimes. Just remember to be respectful while doing so ."	35
Hearing this, I reflected on my attitude. Although I believed in my abilities, I realised my attitude was not helping me build rapport with Mrs Dee to truly gain from her wealth of experience . After all, it was known among the neighbours that she used to teach music at a university for decades. I decided to humble myself before her.	40
Who would have thought that, years later, I would recall that fateful evening, feeling grateful for heeding my mother's advice ?
