Somewhere inside the cave, the jingle came again. Gemma turned to see an animal approaching. Its steps were slow and deliberate. Each planned step was made more prominent by the hair-raising ringing of a bell dangling from its neck. As the mysterious creature emerged from the shadows, Gemma let out a gasp. It was a jaguar.

Not wanting to provoke it, Gemma backed away cautiously, inching her way out of the cave. Avoiding eye contact with the jaguar, she tried to blend into the shadowy background.

Suddenly, the jaguar paused to rest on its back legs. Its slim eyes narrowed menacingly. Its powerful gaze bore into Gemma's soul. Exhaling apprehensively, she let out the growing anxiety within her. At that moment, it attacked.

As it sprang towards her, it let out a growl more spine-shaking than Gemma had ever heard. She squeezed her eyes shut.
