

Write a composition of at least 120 words about helping someone in need.

The pictures, not arranged in sequence, are provided to help you think about this topic. Your composition should be based on one, two or all these pictures.

Consider the following points when you plan your composition:

- Who needed help?
- Who came to the person's aid and how did he/she help the person?
- What happened in the end?

You may use the points in any order and include other relevant points as well.

Helping words:

- moved around in a wheelchair
- suffered an injury
- volunteered to be a buddy
- offered to tutor
- improved by leaps and bounds
- willing to lend a helping hand
- greatly appreciated

Helping Someone in Need

In my class, there is a student named Sam who suffered an injury and moved around in a wheelchair. He sometimes struggled with his homework and felt left out during activities. I decided to volunteer to be his buddy.

Every day, I would sit with him, offering to tutor him in our subjects. At first, he found it hard, but with my help, he improved by leaps and bounds! We also became good friends, laughing and sharing stories while we worked on homework together.

In the end, our classmates noticed how much he was learning and included him in everything. One day, Sam surprised me with a thank you card, writing how much he appreciated my support. It felt amazing to know that I made a difference in his life. Helping someone in need was a rewarding experience that I will always remember!
