Working Hard for a Reward

Liam never liked doing chores. Cleaning windows, scrubbing toilets, and sweeping the floor felt like endless work. But one day, his mom made him a deal. If he helped clean the house all week without complaining, he would get his favourite reward—a trip to the amusement park!

Excited but nervous, Liam grabbed a sponge and started with the windows. It was tiring, but he felt proud when he saw them shine. Next, he tackled the toilets, holding his breath as he scrubbed. Sweeping the floor was easier, but he had to make sure he got every corner.

By the end of the week, Liam was exhausted, but the house looked amazing. His mom smiled and said, “Great job, Liam! You earned your reward.” True to her word, she took him to the amusement park that weekend. As he rode the roller coasters and ate cotton candy, he realized something important—hard work truly pays off. From that day on, he didn’t see chores as just work but as a way to earn something special.
