A time you were lost

One day, my family and I went shopping at a large mall. My father, mother, elder brother and I were walking together, looking at different shops. Everything was bright and exciting, especially the toy stores.

As we passed a toy shop, I saw a shelf full of teddy bears. They were soft, colourful and very cute. Without thinking, I wandered into the shop to take a closer look. I was so busy admiring the toys that I did not notice my family had walked away.

After a few minutes, I looked around and realised I was alone. My family was nowhere in sight. I started to panic and my heart began to beat very fast. I walked around the shop and then outside, hoping to find them, but I could not see them anywhere. Tears rolled down my cheeks as I began crying.

Feeling scared, I remembered what my parents had taught me. I asked a kind-looking shop assistant for help. She brought me to the information counter and made an announcement. Soon, my parents came rushing over, looking worried.

I felt relieved and hugged them tightly. From that day on, I learnt never to wander off on my own again.
